THE HOME PAPER

SAY!

(By CHARLES J. ARNOLD)

I'm not using any names but a certain young woman of this town was all puffed Monday afternoon because of the rains. "Why they have just ruined my golf," she exclaimed when I suggested that we had been having some fine growing showers."

Attention C. of C. Why has no recognition been taken of Greencastle's latest industry the big Machine Works, which has been established right in the heart of our business section. Some factory, this, which is in operation, right next door to the Herald Office. And when it comes to beautifying its surroundings, its management has even the Lone Star Cement mill management backed clear off the boards. The wheels of industry start grinding early each morning and all through the day and into the deep recesses of the night, the powerful Ford power plant grinds away. Come on down and take a look. You'll be surprised.

A fellow asked me this afternoon if I was going to start a campaign this summer to have the sidewalks removed from around the court house. Think of that—"start" a campaign. Why, fellow, I'm going to try to stop my campaign this summer, or at the latest, by early fall.

Miss Helen Black, who handles the tickets for most of the civic feasts, sure pulled a fast one on me yesterday. Not content to book me up for one meal at the country club, she "two timed" me into both a luncheon and a dinner. That's going pretty strong for such a "light" eater as me.

Capt. Bernie McMahon certainly had the old rabbit's foot working yesterday. For it was the day for the annual inspection of the DePauw R. O. T. C. unit, and, although it threatened rain all day, a threat was as far as it got, and Bernie's big military show went off without the much feared moisture.

Just a little more than a week now and the big 500-mile automobile classic will be run on the big motor speed way in Indianapolis. The Greencastle band, as usual, will be there tootin' and a lot of the local race enthusiasts will be there rootin'. And with plenty of rootin' and tootin' the old race is bound to be a success.

Here is hoping that the DePauw football team next fall, does as well as the DePauw Golf players did yesterday. They gave the Wabash crew a drubbing. But golf and football are so different.

It sure is a pleasure to watch these youngsters play golf. You know it used to be said that golf was an old man's game. But things have changed and to watch these youths make a golf ball behave is sure a delight to us old boys who rejoice at even an occasional good shot. I watched the finish of the DePauw-Wabash matches on the country club course yesterday morning and believe me those boys know their stuff. Beeson, a DePauw player, played the two morning rounds in even 38s, which is some golf or I'm a checker player.

Golf may be an old man's game but it takes youth to show the old men how!

FLOODS RECEDE AS RAINS CEASE IN SOUTHWEST

FLOODED RIVERS FALL AS RAIN CEASES IN STORM STRICKEN SOUTH WEST—MANY ACRES UNDER WATER

COUNTY SEAT SUBMERGED

Thousands of People Driven From Their Homes By High Water Are Massed In Cities—Are Being Cared For
By Relief Agencies

DALLAS, Texas, May 20.—(INS)—Clearing skies today brought hope of relief to hundreds of homeless lowland residents as turgid flood waters in northern and central Texas and northern Louisiana coiled their way slowly southward toward the Gulf of Mexico.

Cessation of rains over the affected areas during the past twenty-four hours brought slight recessions of flooded rivers although countless acres of fertile bottom lands remained under high waters today.

Marion county, drained by the Big Cypress, Little Cypress and Black Cypress, continued to bear the brunt of the high waters. Jefferson, county seat of Marion county, at the confluence of the Black Cypress and Little Cypress, was almost completely submerged.

Many farm families from the surrounding territory, driven from their homes by the high waters, were in the city, being cared for by relief agencies and city authorities.

The Red River, its flood crests moving through central Louisiana today, still held thousands of acres water-logged under back waters in the northeastern corner of Texas and the northwestern corner of Louisiana.

Improved conditions were reported in central Texas where the Trinity, Brazos, Colorado and Guadalupe rivers have cut tortuous paths over vast acres of lowlands, sending residents to higher land and causing extensive damage to property and crops.

The rivers have begun falling and in the upper regions were within their banks for the first time in nearly ten days.

GANG LEADER FACES CHARGE OF VAGRANCY

CHICAGO GANGSTER HAS BEEN ARRESTED THREE TIMES IN TEN DAYS BY MIAMI
AUTHORITIES

CAPONE GIVES CASH BOND

Special Vagrancy Law Aimed at Gang Chieftain Is Defeated In The City Council of Florida City

MIAMI, Fla., May 20.—(INS)—The case of Al Capone, Chicago gang chieftain arrested here last night on a charge of vagrancy, was postponed until tomorrow when it was called in municipal court today.

The postponement was ordered when city attorney John Watson Jr., failed to appear in the courtroom at the scheduled time to prosecute the case.

The gang leader was nabbed last night under an old city vagrancy ordinance five hours after the final adoption of "air tight" vagrancy ordinance was defeated in council.

Opposition of organized labor, which claimed that the proposed law would permit police to arrest strikers and pickets in the time of a labor controversy, defeated the measure.

The ordinance admittedly was aimed at the Chicago gangster who is spending an extended vacation at his palatial Palm Island estate. A suit is pending to padlock the Capone winter home as a "public nuisance."

Police have arrested the Chicago gangster here twice before in the past ten days without preferring a charge against him, and the new vagrancy ordinance was designed to give them a charge on which they could hold the gangster.

Capone made cash bond of $100 immediately following his arrest last night.

This little rack has a mighty interesting story to tell you

You may see for yourself that New Iso-Vis does not thin out. Ask to see the Ball and Bottle Test at any Standard Oil Service Station.

THAT New Iso-Vis Motor Oil will not thin out in your crankcase almost unbelievably. Yet it is a fact. In each of four small bottles of oil is a tiny metal ball. The speed with which these balls drop to the bottom of the bottles shows you the heaviness of the oils. If the oil is thinned out, the ball falls more quickly.

This test enables you to compare "used" New Iso-Vis with fresh New Iso-Vis—also "used" New Iso-Vis with other kinds of used oil. New Iso-Vis is the only motor oil that will not thin out.

The carbon deposit from New Iso-Vis has been shown by tests to be 50% less than the average deposit of various better grade oils. Also this new oil lubricates at high temperatures, yet flows in icicle weather. Never before has one oil rated so high on so many important points... points that are vital to the long life of your engine. You will find New Iso-Vis at all Standard Oil dealers or service stations.

New ISO-VIS 30's a quart

The New Polarine also is produced by our new refining processes—giving it an efficiency which is exceeded only by New Iso-Vis. The price is 25c a quart.

SYNOPSIS

David Wade sails secretly from New Guinea, where O'Shane had robbed him, with O'Shane's wife in name, Stella Blackney. Her plight had awakened his pity. O'Shane was to claim her on her mother's death, and she loathed and feared O'Shane. On the island of Motoga-ru they trade in copra with the natives. Stella has come to love Wade and fears the half-caste girl, Moira, may win him away, seeing she is not free to marry him herself. They accede to Moira's dying father's request to take the girl to live with them. Stella fears the girl and is jealous of her youthful, seductive charms.

CHAPTER X—Continued

It could not be the love. She was sure of that. Love like hers could not be wrong. If love were wrong, then the whole world was wrong; there was nothing good in the world at all. It did not need her father's training to teach her that. She knew it from her general knowledge of life, from her accumulation of human experience.
It must be the fear that was wrong, she thought. Perhaps she feared when there was naught to fear. That would account for the whole trouble.
She wondered if it was any use trying to solve her problem, anyway. There seemed to be no answer, or way of arriving at an

"I've got everything I want—except one thing."

answer. One came always against an impasse. It was like trying to solve the problem of life itself.
Till sundown she stayed there on the beach. Then she rose and went slowly back to the house.
It was time to prepare the evening meal. David would be waiting. She felt better for her long introspection. Though the result was inconclusive, she understood herself better than she had understood herself before. She knew now there were two Stellas—an ordinary, everyday Stella, governed by common sense; and a mean and inferior Stella, governed by chaos of emotions. She would have to keep this second Stella in subjection. She would be nice to Moira.

CHAPTER XI

Moira proved an energetic member of the partnership. As Stella had striven to make of her home and the trading a success, so did the half-caste strive to make of the pearling a success.

She had a thorough knowledge of the business. Short of being an actual diver, she was fully efficient as her father had been.
She knew how to keep the crewboys at their tasks. Her men found pearls of value with remarkable frequency. She was lucky.
Ordinarily, a pearler looked for no more than one pearl of value in a thousand shells. Her average was one in five hundred, or less. The natives called her Mapota, which was the name they gave to the Spirit of Good Fortune, and made songs about her.

"Money means little to me," she said once. "I've got all I want.
I've got everything I want"—she paused—"except one thing." She looked at Stella in her fine, frank way. "After what you have done for me, I want to do what I can by way of return."

"It is nothing! I have only done what anyone else would have done," said Stella sincerely, and without wondering at her sincerity.

At the end of the first month of the partnership the cutter was laden with copra and pearl-shell and, with the coming of a spell of fine weather, dispatched for Tema, the Solomon Island settlement. Dolobe was placed in charge, and a number of the villagers employed as crew.
From the veranda Stella and David watched the craft fan up the lagoon and away, her sails white and swelling. The dispatch of the vessel was to them an event of great importance. It was their first communication with the outside world.
It meant advertising their presence on Motogaru to all manner of persons—storekeepers, customs, and shipping officials. This island of theirs would be a hiding-place no longer.

"I am a little afraid, David," said Stella. "Just a little, you know."
She looked round to make sure Moira was not about.
He linked his arm in hers. "It is most unlikely that they have ever heard of us. Samora is a long way from Tema, and there is no regular communication between the two places. We will be merely a Mr. and Mrs. Wade, just as we are to Moira. As for O'Shane, I'll bet they don't know such a person exists."

"But O'Shane may have been to Tema. He is not a man to give up easily, as I told you before. He will be looking for us, looking everywhere, sparing neither time nor money. It is very probable he has been to Tema."

"And what if he has?" He regarded her meditatively. "I thought you had got past being afraid of him. You told me you had—"

"Yes, I know." She looked for a moment at the cutter and the trail its wake laid on the sea.

"In any case, I will protect you from him," David put in. "You know that, don't you?" There was definiteness in his tone, the definiteness of a chivalrous gallant.
She thought it fine of him to thus attempt allaying any fears she might have had; and she loved him more than ever for it.

"But it is not him personally that I am afraid of," she said.

"Then what is it?"
"If he has been to Tema the people there will know all about us.
He will be sure to have told them.
In that case the cutter's crew will learn it from them, and when they come back Moira will hear it from them in turn—"

He pressed her arm against his side reassuringly.

"You are still worried about Moira finding out, are you? I don't think you need be. I really don't.
Moira wouldn't care. She is not that sort. There is nothing narrow about her. You must know that by this time. The knowledge that we are—er—not married wouldn't make the slightest difference to her. You needn't worry about that," he added, and left her to attend to a string of coconut-laden villagers.

All Stella's old fear and anxieties came creeping back. She was certain, as she was certain of anything, that discovery of David's unwedded state would make all the difference in the world to Moira.
She fought down her fears. It was impossible, she told herself, that O'Shane had been to Tema.
Even if he had, she would find means of silencing the crew.

With the determination to silence Dolobe's tongue, if necessary—which would not be a very difficult task—she looked again at the cutter, now a fleck of white on the blue whiteness of the sea. She had sentimental regard for the craft.
Without it she could never have escaped O'Shane and the horror he meant for her. Neither would she have experienced the great, abiding, and disturbing love that had come to her. The cutter had been the means of giving her the most tremendous experience of her life; and witnessing its departure was like witnessing the departure of an old and valued friend. Impulsively she waved a hand to it; and to her fancy it seemed that the white fleck dipped in reply.

David calculated that the craft would return in a week.

"Three days to reach Tema, a day to unload and fill up with the goods and rations, and three days to get back," he calculated, as they sat at lunch. "In my letter to the storekeeper I told him to get her away as quickly as he could. Natives have no idea of time, and they might easily spend a month at the settlement. If they are very long away, we are going to be short of trading goods."

"And the pearling will have to stop too," said Moira. "For my stores are also down to vanishing point. And that will be a pity, now that fine weather is here, and looks like lasting awhile." And she fell to discussing the prices they were likely to obtain for the pearl-shell they had sent away, talking of weights, and qualities, and sizes, of "nacre," "sheen," and "chicken-shell," and other technicalities in a most business-like and matter-of-fact way. Very accomplished and civilized did she look as she sat there, keen, full-blooded and intensely alive.

Once it was at the pearling-bed, whither Stella and David had accompanied her one morning to watch the "swimming divers" at work. The villagers were extraordinarily adept. From their canoes, each slipped overside, turned in the water as easily as a fish might turn, swam down rather than dived, and stayed on the sea-floor a seemingly incredible time before coming up with the pearl-shells he had found. Indeed, one stayed down so long that Stella confessed a fear that maybe something had happened to him.

FIRST SENIOR WEEK CHAPEL HELD TODAY

PRESIDENT OXNAM SPEAKS ON "COMING OUT—WHAT DOES IT REALLY MEAN?"—CAMERON PRESIDES

Angus Cameron of Indianapolis, president of the senior class at DePauw university, presided at the senior chapel exercises today. It was the first chapel of senior week and is known as "coming out." It was the first time that the class appeared in cap and gown.

The speaker for the exercises was President Oxnam who used as his subject, "Coming Out—What Does It Really Mean?" In his introduction the speaker concentrated on the word "out" and gave some of the connotations it brought to the mind.

"To a prisoner the word 'out' means everything. It is release. To some seniors it may mean just that, but not to all. To a pitcher on a base ball team, the umpire's cry of 'Out' is most welcome. It means that the runner is retired and the bases are free for other aspirants. It may mean that to some members of the faculty."

"When applied to bad manner or anything beyond the pale of the accepted, it is usually referred to as being 'out.' It may mean that. But what I believe it should mean is 'Out of darkness into light.' Out of the darkness of superstition into the light of free thinking."

"Another illustration that is pertinent is the fact that though you as seniors will be out of our sight you will be in our hearts." If you are willing, President Oxnam said, to leave the serfdom of self interest for the nobility of service, thirty years from now you will find that America is a better place and it is a better world to live in.

Three hundred seniors marched into Meharry Hall to the strains of the organ played by Prof Van Denman Thompson at the beginning of the chapel period.

"The Marriage Playground" The filmization of "The Children," Edith Wharton's famous novel which ran last year in Pictorial Review, will be seen and heard at the Voncastle theater today, Wednesday and Thursday. The title of the all-talking picture is "The Marriage Playground." It describes the revolt of a family of seven children against the divorce-mad, thrill-thirsty antics of their elders.

Mary Brian is co-featured with Fredric March as one of the leading characters in the production. She is Judith Wheeler, the eldest of the children. March is Martin Boyne, the American who befriends the parentless children.

Among the favorite players cast in supporting roles are Huntley Gordon, Seena Owen, Kay Francis, Lilian Tashman, William Austin and Jocelyn Lee. Six child actors play prominent parts in the production.

The original novel, "The Children," had the distinction of being chosen by the Book-of-the-Month Club in September, 1928.

Added to the program is an all-talk Charley Chase comedy, "Crazy Feet," and a September horoscope.
